

Special Issue – ‘Grounded Theory: Approaches and Applications’

Qualitative Sociology Review (a new electronic journal) is planning a thematic issue on ‘Grounded Theory’.

All social scientists for whom qualitative research methodology is the basic perspective of empirical investigation and analysis, are welcomed to submit their papers to the special edition of ‘Qualitative Sociology Review’. Empirical, theoretical and methodological articles applicable to all fields and specializations within social sciences but concerning the methodology of grounded theory will be published there. We welcome diverse approaches to application of grounded theory methodology and for this case including also the quantitative ones. We welcome methodological analyses of different approaches to grounded theory and especially the new ones. Papers describing applications of grounded theory in many contexts of social life are also considered important to the editors.

The issue is to be published next year. The deadline for submission is 31st May 2006. All submitted articles will be reviewed according to the procedure laid out on the journal's web site (http://www.qualitativesociologyreview.org/ENG/authors_eng.php).
